

Evenings of clairvoyance: What to expect

Every medium works slightly differently using a combination of their psychic abilities and the mediumistic senses to link with our friends and loved ones in spirit. Because each medium injects their own personality into their delivery, no two evenings of clairvoyance will be the same. Even two evenings presented by the same medium will be different because of the personalities in spirit which they bring forward. The thing which remains constant is that mediums work with love and sincerity to link our two worlds. Some mediums will come to you directly, others will describe the person or situation they are linking with and ask who can understand the information. Either way, it is important that you speak up to establish the voice link and spirit likes to hear our voice. Simple yes, no or don't know answers are all you need to give, the medium will do the rest.

A medium can only work with those spirits who want to come forward. Some spirits are still getting used to their new surroundings and aren't ready to come forward yet, others may feel ready but recognise that it may be too soon for their loved ones to be able to deal with emotionally. Others may simply be busy – there are things to be getting on with over there too you know! That doesn't mean that they are not with us or have forgotten us, simply that the time isn't right.

With that in mind, it is best not to arrive at an evening of clairvoyance with a fixed idea of which loved ones we want to hear from. We should be open minded to the idea of hearing from anyone we have known in our lives, family friends, workmates, teachers, schoolmates, neighbours or even the family or friends of someone on the earth plain with whom we are in contact now. After all, not everyone is open minded and some people will never attend an evening of clairvoyance. Their friends or relatives may have an important message for them and the only way they can get that message to them is through you. So be prepared to hear from just about anyone, even those in-laws you thought you'd left behind when you got divorced.

Messages can vary enormously too. Spirit may present the medium with images, words or physical sensations as evidence of their identity and to re-assure their loved ones that they are happy, safe and free of pain in the spirit world. Some messages are no more than that, simply a re-assuring hello. Other messages may give some insight into current situations and circumstances. Spirit can also point us in the direction of friends or family here on earth who may need a little support right now.

Messages can be funny, emotional, sentimental or advisory and the medium will know just how to deliver these with the right balance of humour, compassion and sensitivity. Nothing of a personal nature will be divulged publicly and the medium will sense if you want them to stop or move away from a particular subject.

As an audience member we need to respect the privacy and feelings of others around us and so we should listen quietly to what the medium is saying and avoid staring at the person receiving the message. It is also important to make sure you switch your mobile phone off completely to keep the atmosphere clear of electro-magnetic interference.

We understand that if you or your friends and family have just had a message which struck a chord or which needs further discussion to validate it, there is a great temptation to discuss it right there and then. However we would respectfully ask that, out of respect to the medium and fellow audience members, you keep this discussion until after the session has ended.

Depending on the medium's style of presentation, the number of people receiving a message on any given occasion will vary, but you should be aware that there is never time for everyone to receive a message. Please don't be disappointed. You will still have had the experience of being part of a special occasion full of love, truth and evidence of the continuation of the soul after leaving the earth plain.
