

What have you come here for?

By Jamie Dickie

*Why have you come here this time, what does your soul require?
What lesson awaits your eager soul, just waiting to transpire?
Have you given it much thought lately, in fact are you even aware,
That you're on the most wondrous journey, though your consciousness knows not to where?*

*For through each of our incarnations, we rarely get to see,
The joys and woes we knew before, the people we used to be.
It is only when we return back home, reunited with spirit en-masse,
We can take the time to evaluate all that which came to pass.*

*With each life we grow even further, our wisdom is stretched even more.
Experiences new old and challenging, we save in our spiritual store.
Each visit we are given is a blessing, the universe hands us a gift.
To take us once more on a journey – an enriching and spiritual lift.*

*Some trips will be smoother than others, but tough ones help more than we know.
And in some we may be the teacher, leading others to learn as they grow.
We must cherish each one of our journeys and take time to take stock after each.
Once we know there are no limitations, there is nothing outside of our reach.*
